The Right Choice

Family & Teamwork

"First Group"

Your family is the first "group" to which children are part of. It's important to help children see their family as a team that works really well when each person does his or her part. Assign chores that are age-appropriate to teach a spirit of helpfulness. Children tend to be more cooperative when they have some choice in the matter, you might offer choices for jobs they can do.

Encourage Team work. When Children are part of a team in projects with family and friends --building something, cooking, putting on a play or musical, or pretending together, making music or singing--they strengthen the social skills that build cooperation skills. The most valuable tools children are learning are to be flexible, cooperation, empathy and to use language to express their thoughts and feelings.

"Tell me and I will forget, Show me and I will remember, Involve me and I will understand." (Chinese Proverb)
